2011 TRIP OUTCOMES SURVEY OF PASSENGERS

Executive Summary

In January-February 2011, 469 written surveys were sent to active passengers of the TRIP volunteer driver service for Riverside County, California. 372 completed surveys were returned (79.3%). The current survey focused on the physical and mental health conditions of passengers, TRIP's capacity for providing necessary medical transportation, and included an opportunity for respondents to tell us, in their own words, about the performance of TRIP in meeting their needs.

Riverside passengers rely heavily on TRIP for access to physical and mental health services; the average amount of trips passengers take each month for health purposes is about 1 time per week. Survey respondents suffer from an average of 4.1 debilitating conditions and 32% of them take ten or more prescribed medications a day (highest reported was 20 medications each day).

55% of the respondents said they had been diagnosed with depression or thought they were suffering from depression. Of those, 47% said they became depressed after the onset of serious health issues, while 29% said they had been depressed before becoming ill or suffering debilitating conditions.

Presumably the high survey response rate suggests TRIP passengers believe the service to be essential to their ability to travel to meet their needs. Concepts that often were used to describe the impact that TRIP has had on individual lives include: less worry, freedom, independence, peace of mind, not depressed, participate, get out, security, easier to ask for help.
